Windows XP End of Support

Many of you may have heard or noticed the note on my invoices, "MICROSOFT NOTICE: Microsoft will end support of Windows XP on 4/8/2014. Your computer manufacturer will also end its support. Please feel free to call if you have any questions." Again, what does this mean to you? If you are using a computer that boots up to Windows XP, as of April 8, 2014 Microsoft, your computer's manufacturer, your anti-virus software and everybody else in the computer business will not support Windows XP. I will, however do whatever I can if you still use it after that date. Be aware, any issue that is minor now with XP, may necessitate replacing your computer after that date. Most Windows XP computers are not capable of upgrading to any other version of Windows. This is something to think about if you find yourself sitting on $400 and nowhere to spend it. If you decide to replace your Windows XP computer, please keep me in the loop so you can get the best deal possible throughout the transition. Please call for free advice before you spend any money.

Updated 4/8/14

Windows XP R.I.P.

On April 8th, Windows XP is no longer supported. What this means is your old Windows XP computer will be vulnerable to any new viruses and infections, as updates to combat new viruses will no longer be provided. Recommendation: Look for a new computer or take your Windows XP computer off the Internet. Shopping for a new computer? Click the link below, print the page and take it shopping with you.
